

FILAMATIC NEWS

NATIONAL INSTRUMENT COMPANY, INC. • 4119 Fordleigh Road • Baltimore, MD 21215 • Tel. (410) 764-0900 • Fax (410) 764-7719

Internet: <http://www.filamatic.com> • Email: info@filamatic.com

Summer 1999

Manufacturers of Liquid Filling, Capping and Packaging Systems

Contact: Sales Department, for more information

CD-ROM Format Provides User-Friendly Documentation and Eases Validation

National Instrument Company offers documentation for all its machines in a CD-ROM format to supplement the printed documentation. The electronic manuals provide users with quick and easy access to information. The CD-ROM format also helps ease the validation process.

Each custom-produced CD-ROM includes all pertinent information needed for the operation and periodic maintenance of a National Instrument Company machine. Included are the operations manual, set-up instructions, component drawings, control logic code program, electrical specifications, schematics, maintenance, and lubrication information.

In addition to information in text form, the CD-ROM also contains photos, videos, and sound clips to aid the operator in set-up and maintenance procedures. These state-of-the-art features are incorporated to enhance the customer's operational requirements.

CD-ROMs ease the validation process. CD-ROM files can be copied into a pre-existing validation format/template. Electronic documentation also promotes environmental consciousness.

The information on each CD-ROM is formatted such that it can be easily accessed from either IBM compatible or Macintosh platforms.

If necessary, additional hard copies of specific sections or the entire operations manual can be printed from the CD-ROM at the user's discretion.

CD-ROM based documentation facilitates accessibility of information and eliminates the need for bulky operations manuals. A keyword search feature allows the customer to enter a key word and the information becomes quickly available. The CD-ROM medium offers enhanced flexibility and fast access to relevant information.

National Instrument Company is a leader in technological innovations within the packaging industry. The in-house production of CD-ROM based documentation reaffirms National Instrument Company's commitment to customer satisfaction.